

Laura Kerr is an environmental and natural resources lawyer with Perkins Coie. She regularly advises on compliance issues, permitting, business transactions and engages in litigation involving a variety of environmental laws including the Clean Water Act, Clean Air Act, Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act, Resource Conservation and Recovery Act, Toxic Substances Control Act, National Environmental Policy Act, Endangered Species Act, Migratory Bird Treaty Act. Before entering the legal profession, Laura worked as a researcher and educator in environmental science. Laura graduated from Macalester College and earned her law degree from Lewis and Clark Law School.

Susan Jane Brown is a staff attorney with the Western Environmental Law Center (WELC) and serves as WELC's Wildlands & Wildlife Program director. Her primary focus of litigation is federal public lands forest management, but her practice includes cases involving the Endangered Species Act (ESA), National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), National Forest Management Act (NFMA), and other land management statutes. She is also heavily engaged in collaborative forest restoration in the Upper John Day Basin in eastern Oregon, and has thrice been appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture to the Federal Advisory Committee on the Forest Service's 2012 Planning Rule; she is also a former co-chair of the Committee. Susan Jane graduated from Vanderbilt University and earned her law degree from Lewis and Clark Law School.

Travis Joseph is President and CEO of the American Forest Resource Council. He was born and raised in Springfield, Oregon but spent eight years in Washington D.C. working for the U.S. House of Representatives. He was a senior legislative aide to an Oregon congressman, a senior policy advisor on the House Natural Resources Committee, and the Director of Northwest Policy for the House Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure. Travis earned his bachelor degree in history and international studies from the University of Oregon and a master's degree from the London School of Economics and Political Science in environment and development.

Zak Kearns is a litigator at Larkins Vacura Kayser LLP. His practice focuses on environmental and business disputes. He has worked on cases involving the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act (CERCLA), the Clean Air Act (CAA), the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), and other state and federal environmental laws. He has also written articles on environmental and energy law topics ranging from wind power in California to CERCLA liability for air emissions. Zak was previously an associate at Marten Law PLLC. He graduated from Stanford University and earned his law degree at Harvard Law School.