

Lizzy Potter is a staff attorney at Advocates for the West, a non-profit firm that represents conservation organizations in cases involving conflicts over public lands, wildlife, and natural resources. She is currently focusing on Endangered Species Act issues with federal dam operations, and National Monument defense work.

Prior to joining Advocates for the West, Lizzy spent several years as an associate attorney at Smith and Lowney, a public interest law firm based in Seattle. There, she handled an assortment of Clean Water Act and Endangered Species Act citizen suits, and state permit and land use appeals.

Lizzy earned her J.D. and LL.M in Environmental and Natural Resources Law from Lewis and Clark Law School, and her B.A. in Environmental Studies with a Biology Concentration from Denison University.
