

Scott Morrill, JD

Scott Morrill is the former manager of the Client Assistance Office and former assistant disciplinary counsel at the Oregon State bar. During his tenure at the bar he presented numerous ethics CLE's. The ethics portion of any CLE always felt like a necessary evil and was usually quite dry. Since leaving the bar and retiring he has developed a 60 minute ethics CLE that draws on the humor he observed while handling complaints about Oregon lawyers.

Prior to working at the bar Scott was in a private practice in Tualatin where he handled cases involving the three highest practice areas that lead to complaints (criminal law, domestic relations and personal injury). However, he managed to avoid having any complaints made about him until he went to work for the bar (ironic). Scott also was Tualatin's municipal court judge and did pro tem work for the Beaverton Justice Court where he also heard some interesting stories.
